

Neck Comparison

- These Sebastopol geese demonstrate a balanced neck length that complements overall body size and breed type. It's important to note that ganders may appear longer necked because of posture. Left picture is gander, right are hens.

- The white gander (left) exhibits long neck length. The saddleback goose next to him is included for scale and comparison. The second picture is also a gander.

Normal extension of the neck during calls may look elongated.
It is best to observe when your geese are at rest to ensure an accurate assessment.
